The posts, in this case, will be compressed from the dead load, the effect of which is therefore added to that of the diagonals (being of the same quality), instead of being subtracted as before.

For a deck span this adaptation of the bowstring truss is to be commended as economical in material and pleasing in appearance.