...of offering greater resistance to strains than timber, possesses the further advantage of being susceptible of receiving the most suitable forms for strength without injury to the material; while timber, if wrought into the best forms for the object in view, may in some cases, be greatly injured in strength. Iron bridges are made either of cast or of wrought iron. Many bridges have been built of cast iron alone, but iron iron bridges are either a combination of cast and