is, however, no rule which is rigidly adhered to by bridge builders. But in all cases the total section of the material through the eye is made to exceed that through the bar, and the section of the pin also exceeds that of the bar. The eye-bars composing the lower chords are disposed on each side of the suspension and counter-ties and between ribs in the bases of the post, and are combined.