HORBS, WILLIAM HERBERT. Earth Features and Their Meaning. 506 pp., New York, 1912.
Water gaps are described with mention of the Delaware Water Gap as an illustration.

A few localities in Northampton County where graphite has been found are briefly described.

SALISBURY, ROLLIN D., BARROWS, HARLAN H., and TOWER, WALTER S. The Elements of Geography. 616 pp., New York, 1912.
Brief mention of the Delaware Water Gap.

1913

In these two papers barell suggested the formation of the terraces (peneplains) of the Appalachians by marineplanation instead of fluvial erosion.

Describes the important minerals and rocks of Pennsylvania and gives the principal localities where they occur. Many localities in Northampton County are cited.

Describes the distribution and characteristics of the "soft vein" and "hard vein" slates of Lehigh and Northampton Counties with brief descriptions of some quarries.

Contains a short chapter on the cement materials and cement industry of the Lehigh District (pp. 310-322) with a generalized map of the region.

Brief description of the Northampton County limestones (p. 318).

Contains three analyses of Northampton County limestones (p. 94).

Discusses the origin and correlation of various Paleozoic formations represented in Northampton County, particularly the Martinsburg and Shawangunk and mentions specifically a few localities within the county.