Wherry, Edgar T. A Peculiar Oolite from Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.
Describes a peculiar oolite just north of Bethlehem, in which many spherules have the lower portion dark and the upper portion white.

1916

Cleland, Heedman Fitzgerald. Geology, Physical and Historical.
Mentions the Delaware Water Gap.

Discusses the correlation of the Shawangunk formation and concludes that it is of Medina-Clinton-Miagaran age. The sections at Delaware Water Gap and Lehigh Gap are described.

Stose, George W. The Delaware Water Gap.
A generalized description of the geologic and physiographic features of the Delaware Water Gap quadrangle.

Part V, Precipitation, 205 pp., 1916.
Gives precipitation data for Bethlehem, Easton and Nazareth.
Information concerning the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. and the Delaware River.

1917

Describes the utilization of the Lehigh and Delaware Rivers before the advent of the railroad.

Gerter, Albert L. Tile Stoves of the Moravians at Bethlehem, Pa.
Brief description of the making of pottery, tile and clay pipes of local clay at Bethlehem between 1743 and 1793.

Rapp, R. Francis. Lehigh and Delaware Division Canal Notes.
Some interesting facts concerning navigation on the Lehigh Canal and Lehigh River and descriptions of floods of the Lehigh River.

Schrader, Frank C., Stone, Ralph W., and Sanford, Samuel. Useful Minerals of the United States (A Revision of Bulletin 585 (250 pp.)
Washington, 1914).
Lists following minerals and rocks from Northampton County: Allansite, asbestos, cement material, copper, fluor spar, mica, mineral paint, psilomelane, sand, serpentine, black slate, slate, talc,umber, wad, wavelite.

Part III, Gazetteer of Streams, 657 pp., Harrisburg, 1917.
Gives natural and artificial features of the following streams: Delaware and Lehigh rivers, and Martins, Bushkill, Hokendauqua, Monocacy, Saucon and Durham Creeks.
Describes dams and water power of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co.
Describes floods of the Delaware and Lehigh Rivers.